

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,)
)
Plaintiff,)
)
v.)	Criminal Action
)	No. 13-10200-GAO
)
DZHOKHAR A. TSARNAEV, also) known as Jahar Tsarni,)
)
Defendant.)
)

BEFORE THE HONORABLE GEORGE A. O'TOOLE, JR.
UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

STATUS CONFERENCE AND MOTION HEARING

John J. Moakley United States Courthouse
Courtroom No. 9
One Courthouse Way
Boston, Massachusetts 02210
Tuesday, November 12, 2013
10:02 a.m.

Marcia G. Patrisso, RMR, CRR
Official Court Reporter
John J. Moakley U.S. Courthouse
One Courthouse Way, Room 3510
Boston, Massachusetts 02210
(617) 737-8728

Mechanical Steno - Computer-Aided Transcript

1 APPEARANCES:

2 OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY

3 By: William D. Weinreb, Aloke Chakravarty and 4 Nadine Pellegrini, Assistant U.S. Attorneys
5 John Joseph Moakley Federal Courthouse
6 Suite 9200
7 Boston, Massachusetts 02210
8 On Behalf of the Government

9 FEDERAL PUBLIC DEFENDER OFFICE

10 By: Miriam Conrad, Esq.
11 Timothy G. Watkins, Esq.
12 William W. Fick, Esq.

13 51 Sleeper Street
14 Fifth Floor
15 Boston, Massachusetts 02210
16 - and -

17 CLARKE & RICE, APC

18 By: Judy Clarke, Esq.
19 1010 Second Avenue
20 Suite 1800
21 San Diego, California 92101
22 On Behalf of the Defendant
23
24
25

P R O C E E D I N G S

THE CLERK: All rise.

(The Court enters the courtroom at 10:02 a.m.)

THE CLERK: United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts. Court is in session. Be seated.

For a status conference motion hearing in the case of United States versus Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, 13-10200.

MS. PELLEGRINI: Good morning, your Honor. Nadine Pellegrini.

MR. WEINREB: Good morning, your Honor. William Weinreb for the United States.

MR. CHAKRAVARTY: And Aloke Chakravarty for the United States.

MS. CLARKE: Judy Clarke, Miriam Conrad, William Fick
and Tim Watkins for Mr. Tsarnaev.

THE COURT: Good morning.

COUNSEL IN UNISON: Good morning.

THE COURT: I thought we would start by addressing some scheduling matters.

Can the government confirm that it has commenced the internal process under the protocol by sending -- making a submission to Washington? You had said earlier that you expected to do it by the end of October.

MS. PELLEGRINI: Your Honor, it will be completed this week.

1 THE COURT: It has not started yet?

2 MS. PELLEGRINI: It has not been sent.

3 THE COURT: The reason I ask is that implicates the 4 date for the filing of notice of election, and I think the 5 government had previously asked that it be not less than 90 6 days from the date of the submission.

7 MS. PELLEGRINI: And that's because, as we understand
8 it, the usual amount of time is approximately 90 days. It 9 could be shorter, your Honor, but just to be on the safe side, 10 we cited the Court to the 90 days.

11 THE COURT: Well, I think I would actually like to set 12 it a little shorter than that. The date that had originally 13 been proposed was January 31st, and I think that's an 14 acceptable date. So that notice to be filed by the government 15 under Section 3593(a) is due not later than by the close of 16 business on January 31st. I think that's important because 17 it's obviously a significant event in the life of the case.
18 Other things will be affected by that, obviously, including 19 other schedules.

20 I'd also like to think about a schedule for any 21 potential defense motions that are not of a discovery nature.
22 I don't know whether any are contemplated.

23 Mr. Watkins?

24 MR. WATKINS: Perhaps I may speak to that, your Honor.

25 We're asking -- what the Court is asking is to set a

1 schedule today for a deadline for substantive motions. We're 2 asking the Court not to do that, and instead, to defer that to 3 a later status conference, perhaps towards the end of 4 January/the beginning of February, once we do get some kind of 5 answer from the government about whether they are going to seek 6 the death penalty.

7 There are a number of reasons for that. In our view, 8 automatic discovery is not complete. We have continued, up in 9 recent weeks, to get additional materials that are automatic 10 discovery, and there may be additional pieces of automatic 11 discovery that should be coming. As the Court knows, we have a 12 discovery dispute concerning other what we believe falls under 13 automatic discovery. That is just really the tip of the 14 iceberg, and we think there will be more discovery requests 15 coming.

16 Just a couple of examples: We don't have medical 17 reports, so far as I know, of the named victims in the 18 indictment. That would seemingly fall under automatic 19 discovery. We don't have forensic reports of much of the 20 digital media that has been supplied to us.

21 Just as a -- on a more basic level, we're approaching 22 100,000 -- closing in on 100,000 pages' worth of discovery, 23 paper discovery. In addition, there's a variety of computer 24 media that we have; a variety of search warrants -- a couple of 25 dozen search warrants -- that we have.

1 So we are almost to the point, to paraphrase badly
2 Donald Rumsfeld, we almost know what we don't know at this 3 point. We're not in a position to start making more 4 substantive discovery requests of the government to make sure 5 that we have all of what it is -- what we're entitled to under 6 the automatic discovery rules.

7 In addition, the volume of the discovery 8 is -- engenders investigation that we simply must do both in 9 mitigation and on guilt-or-innocence kinds of issues. We 10 cannot do that kind of investigation that's necessary, try to 11 determine what more automatic discovery is required, while at 12 the same time trying to draft and file substantive motions.
13 Indeed, at this point we don't really know where the 14 substantive motions might lie, what needs to be addressed via a 15 suppression motion, what needs to be addressed vis-à-vis a 16 motion to dismiss filing.

17 So it is really quite premature at this point to 18 schedule any kind of deadline for substantive motions. I can 19 understand the government's point is that we perhaps have 20 enough that we could start to get going on those kinds of 21 issues, but it becomes increasingly difficult from a practical 22 matter to do that. None of the four of us -- we are blessed 23 with four attorneys on the case, but none of our professional 24 lives started over on April 15th. We all had other 25 obligations. Ms. Clarke has professional obligations,

1 obligations on other cases that she has to attend to;
2 Ms. Conrad has to make sure the wheels don't come off the 3 office as each machination of Congress unfolds over the months;
4 Mr. Fick and I both have trials in very complex matters coming 5 up in the next several months.

6 To try to simultaneously draft any kind of motions to 7 suppress, even figure out exactly where we should be going with 8 the motions to suppress and the motions to dismiss, simply does 9 not make sense. We would have to stop discovery review really 10 in its tracks, for all practical purposes.

11 And the question becomes to what end we need to do 12 that, why we need to get into substantive motions so quickly in 13 the overall scheme of the case. We are, and I know the 14 government has been, working very hard to make our way through 15 the discovery and to amicably trade discovery, and I know that 16 we've been working hard in our office to try to get through 17 this massive volume of discovery.

18 That would, for all practical purposes, come to an end
19 if we then had to start to turn towards legal issues. And it 20 raises the specter of filing a motion to suppress or a motion 21 to dismiss now only to find that we overlooked something -- we 22 got closer to trial, found out there was some piece of evidence 23 the government intended to introduce which we had not addressed 24 because we simply hadn't gone through with a thorough comb that 25 we need to [sic] during this automatic discovery process.

1 The case is moving along. And this is a case where 2 none of us is sitting on our hands looking for things to do.
3 Really, the issue right now is automatic discovery. And 4 going -- moving on to substantive motions simply doesn't make 5 sense.

6 It is contrary really to the local rules and the 7 practice that we have here. The local rules are really 8 designed to make sure that all of automatic discovery was 9 provided to a point where a magistrate judge, or in this case 10 your Honor, was comfortable that everybody had complied with 11 the obligations. We're simply not there, at that point. The 12 local rules also contemplate that that would be done in advance 13 of filing the substantive motions. And we simply aren't to 14 that stage. I don't think there's any reason to treat this 15 particular case differently where we are trying to do two 16 independent issues at one time.

17 Finally, your Honor, in addition to the automatic 18 discovery issues and the review that's going on, substantive 19 motions that need to be filed, this is a time to consider 20 completely independent kinds of legal issues. The Court raised 21 a motion to change venue. Certainly that is something that 22 should be looked into and filed separately and independently.
23 It is going to take quite a bit of resources and quite a bit of 24 attention from some or all of us on the case. Going into 25 substantive motions right now means that trial should follow

1 shortly thereafter, really putting the cart in front of the 2 horse as to other independent matters such as filing a motion 3 to change venue.

4 Simply, we would submit it does not make sense to file
5 a motion, a filing date, a briefing schedule at this point 6 where we're simply nowhere near the point where we can sensibly 7 decide what should be addressed, what should not, and then 8 thoroughly brief that for the Court. Instead, we would ask the 9 Court to defer the decision until January, or perhaps even 10 February, in conjunction with the government's notice here, at 11 which time we will be, we're confident, in a position to tell 12 the Court exactly when we're able to thoroughly brief those 13 kinds of issues, and then the Court can schedule a briefing 14 schedule.

15 THE COURT: Mr. Weinreb?

16 MR. WEINREB: Your Honor, we would like to set dates
17 today. In fact, we were going to propose setting a trial date 18 today, and then working backwards from that to the various 19 deadlines for filing of motions.

20 First of all, we dispute the characterization that 21 automatic discovery is not complete. We have, in fact, 22 provided -- either by providing copies of matters or by making 23 available for inspection and review, which is all that's 24 required under Rule 16 -- all the material that is called for 25 under automatic discovery.

1 Medical reports of victims is a good example of that.
2 We have the medical reports. We told the defense early on that 3 they were available for inspection and review. We said that we 4 were not going to produce copies of autopsy photos and other 5 matters because of the sensitivity of them, but that they were 6 welcome to view them at any convenient time for them.

7 With respect to forensic reports of digital media, to 8 the extent that they exist, we have produced them. It may be 9 that additional ones will come into existence. As the labs 10 continue to process digital media and is required under the 11 local rules, we'll produce those as they become available.

12 I'd also note that the discovery request that the 13 defense has filed, their first round which presumably would be 14 based on defects that they saw in the automatic discovery, 15 relate almost entirely to mitigation evidence, which is not 16 something that is comprehended within automatic discovery. So 17 I do not think that that is either a fair characterization of 18 what's happening in the discovery process nor is it a reason to 19 delay setting dates for the filing of substantive motions.

20 It may be that as the defense continues its review of 21 the materials that the government has made available to them 22 they will find new grounds for motions that they wish to file, 23 and we're not asking the Court to preclude that. But I do 24 think that there are motions that at this point the defense
25 could file, particularly ones they've mentioned already: A

1 motion to suppress statements is something that -- they had the 2 statements since even well before the date for automatic 3 discovery commenced; a motion to dismiss the case based on 4 anything to be found on the face of the indictment -- they've 5 had the indictment since long before automatic discovery -- a 6 motion for change of venue, just to name three. And we would 7 propose 90 days as a date for the filing of those motions.

8 We would also propose that the Court set a trial date
9 sometime for the fall of 2014, and that we then can work 10 backwards from there to set any additional dates that may be 11 necessary. Absent something like that, we will run into a 12 situation where months pass, dates are then set for the filing 13 of motions, and when the motions are all resolved, we'll then 14 be in an open-ended period where we have to schedule a trial 15 date at that point for a point far in the future when 16 everybody's schedules are free potentially for months. And 17 that does not seem like an efficient use of judicial resources.

18 So we would propose, in short, at least a deadline for 19 certain substantive motions that the defense has already 20 indicated it intends to file and is capable to file at this 21 point, and then a trial date at an appropriate time so that we 22 can set additional deadlines based on that.

23 THE COURT: Well, I think I agree that it's sensible 24 to think of the entire schedule and think of a trial date in 25 relation to motion dates, and motion dates in relation to the 1 trial date.

2 Let me ask, from the government's perspective, as to a 3 trial, assuming that there are two phases to the trial, could 4 you give me some estimate of what you think will be involved in 5 each of them? And then I guess the second, the follow-on 6 question would be: If there is only a latter phase and not a 7 former phase, what would your -- how much would your estimate 8 differ, if at all?

9 MR. WEINREB: Your Honor, we believe that a trial on 10 the merits would be approximately 90 days, and that the 11 sentencing phase to follow would be six weeks for both sides, 12 not just for the government's case. And that's assuming a 13 half-day -- typical half-day schedule.

14 If we only had a sentencing phase, I think that 15 the -- that phase would be considerably longer than six weeks.
16 That could be 12 weeks in its entirety since a large part of 17 the government's sentencing case will involve establishing 18 evidence of aggravating factors, and those are much the same 19 evidence that would -- it would put on during a trial phase.

20 MR. WATKINS: Your Honor, just on --

21 THE COURT: Let's start with the trial estimate. Do 22 you have any different view on that?

23 MR. WATKINS: I don't have any different view; we have 24 no view at this point. It's impossible for us to even 25 speculate about how long either the guilt or innocence or

1 penalty phase would be precisely for the reasons I've stated:
2 We are plowing our way through what is really voluminous
3 discovery here, so we're simply not in any kind of position
4 where we could say the government is right or the kind of case 5 we would put on.

6 Just a couple of points: It is a frequent reframe in 7 Court that the government says, "We've said it's available."
8 Let's think about what "available" means in this case. That 9 means a storeroom full of documents that we could go and look 10 at at our leisure, if we had any. It means a warehouse full of 11 physical evidence that comprises what the chief of the Boston 12 Police Department said was the most complex crime scene in 13 their history. That's just one of the scenes that we have to 14 deal with. We, of course, have a different -- several 15 different scenes that will be the subject of trial and 16 sentencing.

17 So for the government to say that this has been 18 available or that we've had the indictment for some time, it's 19 absolutely correct. It's meaningful in the sense of automatic 20 discovery and what we're able to get to and whether we can go 21 to the next step, which is substantive motions.

22 Suggesting a trial date in the fall is very, very 23 quick as a matter of any case here in federal court from 24 initial appearance to final disposition. For a case of this 25 magnitude, it is a rocket schedule. And it's simply one that

1 is going to be difficult for, I would suggest, either side to 2 comply with, and comply with their obligations, the government 3 making sure that we have all exculpatory evidence, for us to 4 make sure that we can sensibly understand what the government's 5 case is going to be before we get into the middle of what I 6 understand the government says will be nine months of 7 litigation after a time period of perhaps 15 months where we've 8 had to review all the discovery.

9 All we're asking for at this point is that the Court
10 just defer this particular decision until January or February, 11 where it sounds like we will have much more information about 12 where the government is headed for their presentation. At the 13 same time we'll be much better able, we believe, to answer 14 reasonably when we could file motions and what motions we would 15 file.

16 THE COURT: Well, I think we could set some 17 motion-filing deadlines, as Mr. Weinreb suggests. I think that 18 those that are not dependent, perhaps, or influenced by 19 processing of discovery materials or other factual matters. So 20 I think that a filing date for any motion to change venue or to 21 dismiss the indictment can be set, and I would set that for the 22 end of February -- February 28th, any of those motions.

23 That's not exclusive. We'll leave out
24 evidentiary -- I mean, obviously you can file a motion anytime 25 you want. There's no limit on how soon you can file. We will

1 not address right now any suppression motions, and can consider 2 that later. And I think because it's still somewhat early, 3 that we can defer for now a trial date, but I appreciate the 4 information that you both have contributed on that question.

5 So I think that it would be useful to have -- I
6 don't -- unless someone thinks we need one sooner -- another 7 status conference after the government has made its election.
8 So I would suggest sometime in February for that.

9 Let me ask from the defense point of view,
10 particularly Ms. Clarke since you have to make travel 11 arrangements, do you have any day of the week preference 12 because of your travel?

13 MS. CLARKE: Once we round the middle-of-December 14 corner, I'm pretty much yours.

15 THE COURT: Okay. Well, I'm looking at pretty 16 much -- actually, it's -- whatever that is, three months -- 17 February 12th, a Wednesday morning, at ten o'clock for a 18 further status conference.

19 Okay. I think those were the administrative issues.
20 Does anybody have anything else? We have a couple of motions 21 that I'll hear you on. Are there any other administrative 22 sorts of things besides the motions?

23 MR. WATKINS: Yeah. At the risk of stepping back, the 24 Court scheduled -- particularly the venue motion, the motion to 25 dismiss, that's okay. I think we can live with that. Venue is

1 going to take a little bit of resources to be ready and fully 2 briefed. I think we would need more time for that in order to 3 have a thorough and complete investigation done concerning 4 whether to even ask for a change of venue.

5 THE COURT: Well, no, I think it's something we have 6 to know, and I think three months from now, which is longer
7 from the indictment, I think is enough. So I'd like to stick
8 with that. I'd like to know the answer -- if there is such a 9 motion, I want to know what the answer is going to be.

10 Okay. So let's turn to the motions. And I would like 11 to address first the motion regarding the Special 12 Administrative Measures. And let me say with respect to both 13 motions, they have been extensively briefed, and it's not 14 necessarily helpful or productive to simply reargue what's in 15 the papers. So be confident that I've read the papers several 16 times. So let me start by -- and in each case I'll start by 17 making some comments and then, I guess, invite your response.

18 With respect to the motion on the Special 19 Administrative Measures, the parties have a disagreement as to 20 whether it's something that I have any jurisdiction over. And 21 I, in sum, agree -- well, I guess I agree enough with the 22 defendant that this is something which, under 3142, because it 23 may concern adequate preparation of a defense, which is a 24 consideration for detention, and under general and inherent 25 powers to manage a case, I have enough authority to consider

1 whether the measures work in actual interference with the 2 preparation of the defense.

3 I do not agree with the full defense position that 4 that makes everything about them subject to my review, and I 5 think if there are other issues, such as infringement of 6 constitutional rights, for example, those are better left to an 7 independent action which may well be governed by the Prison 8 Litigation Reform Act, and would probably be a Bivens form of 9 action or something like that. That is not directly at issue 10 in my supervision of the case. So I will put those aside.

11 So what I'm mostly interested in is whether there is 12 practical interference to any substantial degree and in what 13 respects, with the ability of the defense to prepare because of 14 these limitations. Not whether they're annoying, but whether 15 they are inhibiting. I don't know who wants to address that.

16 Mr. Fick?

17 MR. FICK: Yes, your Honor. And I guess the one, I
18 guess, other piece of this is what I would characterize, I 19 guess, as an administrative law, a facial challenge to the 20 SAMs -- which I think is, by nature, the kind of thing that 21 only a court is really in a position to rule on -- and those 22 were the sort of two elements to that argument: the first 23 being that the SAMs here are unwarranted as a factual matter.
24 I mean, the typical parlance in administrative law is 25 "substantial evidence," and the argument was that there is not

1 substantial evidence here upon which it was reasonable for the 2 attorney general to conclude belatedly, four months into the 3 case, that there's a substantial risk of bodily injury or death 4 if the measure is not imposed. And the second piece of that is 5 that the particular regulatory provision, the 501.3A under 6 which they were adopted, does not authorize any restrictions on 7 counsel inside or outside prison walls at all. And so to the 8 extent -- to that extent, all of the provisions about counsel 9 in these particular SAMs, or essentially ultra vires, are 10 outside what the regulation authorizes.

11 And I think quite apart from the question of the 12 extent to which the SAMs interfere with counsel, those are sort 13 of threshold classic questions for judicial determination in 14 the circumstances.

15 THE COURT: I don't necessarily disagree with that; I 16 just say it's for a different judge.

17 MR. FICK: Okay. Going on to the restrictions on 18 counsel, in particular, as the Court knows from the papers, 19 there are sort of two provisions that are -- we find to be the 20 most problematic. That's Provision 2D and 2H. 2D is 21 dissemination of information received by Mr. Tsarnaev from the 22 defense team. There's a -- sort of an initial big-picture 23 problem which is that on the one hand, right, one could look at 24 the SAMs and say, Well, the SAMs permit dissemination of 25 information for purposes of preparing the defense, so what's

1 the problem?

2 Well, the problem is who gets to decide what is a 3 legitimate purpose of preparing the defense. And that is not a 4 theoretical question. It's certainly not a theoretical 5 question in circumstances where attorneys have been prosecuted 6 for having a judgment that's different from the government's 7 judgment. So that's sort of a global problem with that 8 provision.

9 The particular problem with that provision is that any 10 dissemination that is made can only be made by attorneys which, 11 as a practical matter, means if an investigator or some other 12 member of the defense team is talking to a witness, and some 13 issue comes up, some factual issue, no piece of information 14 ever gleaned from the defendant can be shared in the course of 15 that witness interview unless the attorney is sitting there and 16 making that dissemination. And that simply means that an 17 attorney has to be present, essentially, in every witness 18 interview, which is absolutely impractical. And there's 19 really -- given the qualifications and the clearances that the 20 core members of the defense team have already undergone to be 21 allowed to go into FMC Devens and see Mr. Tsarnaev, it's really 22 a restriction that there's no reason for it. And that's what 23 the Mikhel decision of the Ninth Circuit also recognized. It 24 extended the ability to disseminate to other members of the 25 defense team.

1 Another practical issue with that is there's a 2 tremendous number of facts that we are all gleaning in the 3 course of preparing the case and going through discovery, 4 talking to our client. And at some level it becomes very, very 5 difficult to discern whether a fact is a piece of information 6 learned from Mr. Tsarnaev, is it learned from the discovery, is 7 it learned from multiple sources. So then even in the course 8 of a normal interaction between an attorney and a witness or an 9 investigator and a witness, at what point it's even possible to 10 ascertain or recall where a particular piece of information 11 came from becomes, as a practical matter, nearly impossible.
12 So that, in a nutshell, is the problem with Provision 2D on 13 dissemination of information from Mr. Tsarnaev.

14 The sort of flip side of that comes in Provision 2H, 15 which deals with what can be shown to Mr. Tsarnaev. And again, 16 we have the problem there with what is a -- you know, who gets 17 to decide or second-guess what is a legitimate purpose of 18 preparing the defense. And we've already had, as the Court has 19 seen in the papers, some practical issues arise under this 20 provision, albeit ones that were resolved. But even in their 21 resolution it sort of highlights the extent to which the SAMs 22 put the government in the business of the defense team in a way
23 that's very intrusive. I mean, frankly, the government has no
24 business knowing who from the defense team sees the defendant 25 for how long, on what dates, how often, and what, in

1 particular, is shown to him.

2 And so, you know, if there is any justification for a 3 provision like this whatsoever -- and I would submit there is 4 not -- at a minimum there ought to be a taint team that at 5 least at the election of the defense we can address -- to which 6 we could bring these kinds of issues to address them.

7 Now, that wouldn't have to be anything terribly
8 burdensome. I understand things -- in different scenarios
9 there have been taint teams in the U.S. Attorney's Office here.
10 It would simply be a different group of attorneys to whom we 11 could bring issues under the provision that would be insulated 12 from the line prosecutors on the case.

13 And then the final practical concern that we have is 14 with regard to Paragraph 2E. There's the question of who can 15 see Mr. Tsarnaev outside the company of an attorney. And we 16 have managed to negotiate a slight modification to that under 17 which the government has agreed that full-time Federal Defender 18 Office investigators and paralegals will be permitted to 19 interact with Mr. Tsarnaev under this provision, but not the 20 sort of special mitigation specialist who we have retained who 21 is employed under the CJA who has been doing this kind of work
22 for decades longer, frankly, than most of us, the other people 23 in the case, and has even worked under SAMs before.

24 And so for them to draw the line and say, Well, if 25 they're not FDO employees, we're not going to let them in under

1 this provision, I think is arbitrary. And that was also akin
2 to one of the arbitrary features that the Mikheil court vacated 3 in that case.

4 So in a nutshell, those are the practical concerns we 5 have that interfere with our ability to represent Mr. Tsarnaev.

6 THE COURT: Ms. Pellegrini?

7 MS. PELLEGRINI: Your Honor, the Court anticipated the 8 government's argument to some degree. After review of all of 9 the motions filed by both sides, the government does agree that 10 the Court, for these purposes, can consider those allegations 11 which relate to restrictions which allege an infringement upon 12 a Sixth Amendment right to counsel.

13 So there are two different ways that the government 14 suggests that the Court can address these because there are two 15 different groups: One is the group I just mentioned, which 16 relates to an allegation on the Sixth Amendment; and the other 17 seems to be much more a part of what is everyday prison life:
18 regarding mail, phone communications, visitors and media 19 interaction.

20 I do think the Court, by its authority under 3142, has 21 and retains the ability to consider what is reasonable with 22 respect to an opportunity to consult with the defendant. But 23 in that regard, that issue is narrow and the standards to be 24 employed do not involve a fact-by-fact characterization, 25 evaluation. It is far closer to a categorical approach that

1 3142 itself employs when it considers whether or not there is a
2 crime of violence or a 924(c) charge or a crime that carries a 3 maximum penalty of life or imprisonment or death.

4 So that leads us, then, to the question of what is the 5 standard by which the Court can make such a determination. And 6 frankly, despite Mr. Fick's answer, I don't think the Court has 7 any particular concrete discrete examples of its interference.
8 And the Court shouldn't be involved in considering hypothetical 9 and apocalyptic scenarios.

10 The fact that the SAMs may require consultation 11 between BOP officials, the government and counsel, does not 12 mean that the government is second-guessing the experienced 13 defense counsel's determination that materials are, in fact, 14 related to the defense. And that is the determination that 15 this Court has to make: Are those restrictions related to the 16 concerns -- the stated concerns?

17 The fact that the August 27th memo, which is cited in 18 the defense's papers, contains a more fulsome explanation of 19 the background of the determination doesn't give the defendant 20 any new right or any new ability to challenge what is very 21 simply a narrow view: How does this restriction legitimately 22 relate and rationally relate to the stated concern?

23 Under the regulatory scheme if the attorney general
24 had simply said that here's the indictment, and we have a 25 stated national security concern or a concern for violence and

1 public safety, that would be sufficient.

2 So there's also the determination that if, in fact, a 3 civil suit had been brought under 18 U.S.C. 3626, this Court 4 would apply the following: It couldn't grant or approve any 5 prospective relief unless it found that the relief was narrowly 6 drawn, it extended no further than necessary to correct the 7 violation, and was the least intrusive means possible. But the 8 Court was also to give substantial weight to any adverse impact 9 that might be on public safety or the operation of the criminal 10 justice system.

11 Mr. Fick argues that the government is not entitled to 12 know who and when and where. But actually, even under regular 13 BOP regulations that information would be available to the 14 government.

15 The practical aspects of this are, your Honor, that, 16 yes, it places somewhat of a burden -- not an infringement or 17 necessarily a restriction on the ability to consult with the 18 client, but a burden -- to determine that, in fact, what is 19 being disseminated to third parties is related to the defense.

20 There are several aspects that need to be addressed in 21 that regard. We're not looking to second-guess that 22 determination. Might there be a situation where we don't 23 agree? It might. But the SAM speaks to that. The SAM is not 24 a trap for the unwary; it's a notice. And the notice is 25 provided so that the restriction can move along as smoothly as 1 possible.

2 The fact that there may be an issue in the future, I
3 think Mr. Fick's example of the photograph is quite telling 4 with respect to the determination. It seems to me that even 5 from the affidavit Mr. Fick supplied, there wasn't the -- at 6 least initially -- as much information shared between the BOP
7 and defense counsel as to whether that matter, the family 8 photograph, could be shared, but eventually it was worked out.

9 If the defense has any question that it's not 10 nonlegal, it can be sent as nonlegal mail, and it would still 11 be provided to the defendant who, by the way, has agreed that 12 his mail will be reviewed by members of the Federal Defender's 13 Office.

14 With respect to the practicality, this is not a 15 situation as in the Mikhel case. In Mikhel, with respect to an 16 investigator, the Court found because the defendant was housed 17 2,000 miles away from his attorney's office, it was impractical 18 and far too burdensome to require an attorney to accompany the 19 investigator. That's not the situation we have here. And the 20 application of SAMs is unique to each particular pretrial 21 detainee.

22 So in this particular case there's not that aspect.
23 There is a rational basis. In consultation with counsel from 24 the Bureau of Prisons it has been determined that, for example, 25 paralegals stand differently than investigators in some

1 regards. Paralegals are employed by the attorney's office and 2 report directly to the attorney in a chain of authority which 3 allows there to be some oversight. An investigator does not 4 necessarily -- and in this case does not -- report in that 5 manner, and is not, in fact, employed by the particular 6 attorney's office. That was also a consideration.

7 I think, your Honor, that the way that the courts have 8 looked at it is not from the viewpoint of, Oh, my gosh, what 9 could happen in the future; but what are we dealing with right 10 now? In Savage, one of the cases cited by the government, the 11 court indicated that, no, there's no restriction on the ability 12 to consult; there's simply a restriction on the ability to 13 disseminate information to third parties. And that 14 determination can safely be made by the defense underneath the 15 SAMs.

16 The fact that the SAMs provide for some restriction is 17 no different than any other restriction on a pretrial detainee.
18 The Supreme Court in Bell v. Wolfish has long recognized that a 19 pretrial detainee and a convicted prisoner retain 20 constitutional rights, but the very fact of detention may 21 necessarily infringe upon that or restrict it to some degree.
22 The question is: What is the accommodation to be made between 23 that infringement and the institutional right of the 24 institution to address those particular questions and concerns?

25 So that leads me to my second point, your Honor, which

1 is with respect to that day-to-day aspect of prison life, the 2 government still continues in its contentions that that would 3 be appropriate under the PLRA. This Court should not be 4 involved in the administrative day-to-day aspects of a 5 correctional facility.

6 The fact that the attorney general directed the 7 implementation of the SAMs doesn't require that you give that 8 any less deference than if the BOP director implemented them.
9 Under the statute, the AG directs the Bureau of Prisons, and by 10 regulation, only the attorney general can direct BOP to 11 implement those restrictions. To argue that because it's the 12 attorney general, not the BOP, is to basically ignore what is 13 the statutory and regulatory authority of the attorney general.

14 So with that in mind, your Honor, we would ask that 15 the Court -- as I said, the route we're now suggesting today is 16 slightly different but the destination is the same, that the 17 SAMs remain in place because they are legitimately connected 18 and rationally connected to legitimate safety concerns.

19 We ask that because unfettered communications by this 20 defendant may, as the attorney general has determined, result 21 in death or in serious bodily injury, that the SAMs remain 22 undisturbed.

23 THE COURT: So let me ask you about a couple of the 24 specifics that Mr. Fick addressed. And one is, and you already 25 touched on it, but it may -- either you're reading the language

1 differently -- so in 2D, which deals with the dissemination of 2 conversations, the restriction is that only the attorney may 3 disseminate contents of communication to third parties. And I
4 guess -- then it says, "and not the staff." "Staff" is a, 5 perhaps, malleable word.

6 You've addressed it as if a paralegal, in a slightly 7 different context, is in enough of a chain of command with the 8 attorney that for some other purposes they can be thought of as 9 the same team and, therefore, having the same -- I guess
10 that -- and that SAM seems to recognize that under Paragraph E, 11 that the paralegal can act in lieu of the attorney's presence 12 and so on.

13 And so I guess -- this is a very practical question: 14 Is it possible to identify who are permissible staff and who 15 are not permissible staff so that this can be expanded?

16 I tend to agree with Mr. Fick --

17 So you should probably not say anything.

18 (Laughter.)

19 THE COURT: -- that there's some practical issues with 20 making the attorney be there all the time, not to mention 21 economic issues that I have to worry about to some degree.

22 And I guess -- so, if a paralegal is staff but an 23 investigator is not staff -- I mean, can we develop a rubric 24 where that can be sensibly understood in the realities of trial 25 preparation?

1 MS. PELLEGRINI: Your Honor, we're not saying that 2 we're not available or open to negotiation of that. But I just 3 wanted to reiterate that it wasn't made in an irrational -- 4 "Let's just decide to make a difference between a paralegal and 5 an investigator." Throughout the history, if you will, of SAMs 6 that have been imposed, that has always been a consideration
7 and a concern. When an independent contractor is employed -- 8 and by "employed" I don't mean "employed," I mean "used" -- to 9 contact the defendant. The concern was that there was no real 10 control over what that particular investigator did.

11 THE COURT: Right.

12 MS. PELLEGRINI: That being said, are we willing to 13 consider a negotiation depending on what information regarding 14 the accountability can be put into place? Absolutely.

15 THE COURT: Well, just for another example, there may 16 be other kinds of, for lack of a better term, consultants of 17 some kind. So imagine a tax case, for example, where you want 18 to have a forensic accountant. It would seem to me to make 19 sense that that kind of person could be within the defense team 20 and controlled by the attorney enough that it would -- that 21 that person ought to not be subject to this kind of 22 restriction. I can imagine other examples that would be on the 23 other side of that. You know, somebody who does, you know, 24 reproduction of documents, for example, and facsimiles and 25 things like that.

1 So it seems to me there ought to be a sensible 2 authority or permission, however you want to put it, for some 3 people other than the lawyer or hand-in-hand with the lawyer.

4 MS. PELLEGRINI: Your Honor, your own example sort of 5 highlights the problem of simply wholesale making a category of 6 a person who is or who is not able to meet with the defendant 7 alone.

8 We'll consider, as I said, you know, any proposal put 9 forth and make that determination, and we'll do that in all 10 good faith. And I think that's what the SAMs anticipates that 11 we and BOP would do. They are -- I know the defense may 12 disagree, but they take great pains to try and control damaging 13 communication, and that's actually an aspect of it. But if the 14 defense presents what we consider, you know, a viable 15 alternative to that particular restriction, we'll definitely 16 consider that and negotiate on that.

17 THE COURT: Mr. Fick?

18 MR. FICK: Just to clarify, I think there's a 19 distinction between the dissemination provision versus the 20 visit provision. You know, we've tried to negotiate both.
21 We've had no progress on dissemination and some progress on 22 visitation.

23 THE COURT: Well, I think they're aspects of the same 24 problem, which is how -- who should be allowed to disseminate, 25 interact with, whatever, without the attorney always being

1 present.

2 So it can be difficult to talk in categories because 3 they're categories, and, therefore, general.

4 What I have in mind is a list. Maybe you can just 5 agree on people, and forget what they are, who could do this.

6 MR. FICK: With regard to visits, at least, I mean, 7 we've come to agreement about what we are concerned about with 8 one exception, the one exception being the principal mitigation 9 specialist who was appointed under the CJA and who has worked 10 with Ms. Clarke for many, many years, and who's really sort 11 of -- I mean, she's very, very central to the case. And so 12 it's very important for us to be on -- for her to be on that 13 side of the divide with everyone else that we've already agreed 14 about in terms of the visits. And then if those people could 15 be included in the list of those allowed to disseminate, that I 16 think would essentially deal with most of our problems on that 17 account.

18 THE COURT: All right. It may not always be 19 symmetrical; that is, access doesn't necessarily mean authority 20 to disseminate. For example, I'm not sure in that example that 21 there's any -- well, I don't know.

22 MR. FICK: Again, for an investigator, it's really 23 critical to be able to share a fact in the course of any 24 investigation.

25 THE COURT: All right. Were you going to say

1 something?

2 MS. PELLEGRINI: Your Honor, just to reiterate, we 3 will draft a proposal if the Court so wishes, trying to address
4 this particular question. You're right, there is a difference.
5 And just simply placing a person in one category or another 6 doesn't really address necessarily the concerns about the 7 difference between visiting and dissemination of information, 8 but we'll attempt to address that.

9 THE COURT: Okay. Okay. Thank you.

10 Let's move to the discovery motion. And, again, as 11 I've said, I've gone over the specifics in the papers. I know 12 what you're looking for. I think the larger questions are the 13 proper understanding and application of, perhaps, the Brady
14 rule, although I have to say, I don't really see Brady here, 15 but perhaps the more broad understanding that is encompassed in 16 Rule 16 as that may be impacted by local rules classifying 17 things as automatic discovery or not.

18 And finally, under local rule, I guess, 116.1, 19 something or other, there is the recognition in the rules that 20 in complex cases there may be need to do things slightly 21 differently from what the template in the local rules would 22 ordinarily be. And that sort of is in disagreement with 23 Mr. Watkins' earlier point that we should always follow the 24 local rules. I don't necessarily think that's necessary or 25 appropriate in a case that has such complexity, so...

1 MS. CONRAD: Thank you, your Honor.

2 Your Honor, it seems to me that the main two issues 3 here are when disclosure is required and what disclosure is 4 required. With regard to the "when," obviously, we have 5 automatic discovery rules. Those automatic discovery rules do 6 not address a capital case and the application of Brady, which 7 addresses both guilt and innocence and punishment. I mean, 8 clearly Brady applies to mitigating evidence because Brady is a 9 case that talked about mitigation of punishment.

10 So to the extent that --

11 THE COURT: I don't want to be misunderstood. I 12 didn't mean to say that Brady is inapplicable.

13 MS. CONRAD: Okay.

14 THE COURT: What I mean is I don't, from the papers, 15 see a Brady issue, but that's a merits --

16 MS. CONRAD: In terms of exculpatory or in terms of 17 mitigating? That's the part I'm not following.

18 THE COURT: Both. Both.

19 MS. CONRAD: Okay. I respectfully disagree, but I'll 20 address that.

21 The local rules -- the government relies on the local 22 rules that talk about, you know, lowering the offense level.
23 Clearly this is not such a case. I mean, the punishment in 24 this case is not controlled by the Sentencing Guidelines. So 25 the question is when is disclosure, let's just say of

1 mitigating evidence, required.

2 First of all, there is an overlap, as Mr. Weinreb sort
3 of acknowledged in discussing the trial schedule. He said, 4 Well, some of the evidence that we would be presenting in the 5 guilt and innocence phase -- if we didn't have a guilt or 6 innocence phase -- would be presented in the sentencing phase.
7 So there's an overlap between evidence relating to the crime
8 itself and evidence relating to punishment. So it's not a line 9 that you can just draw down the middle.

10 There are a number of cases, and we've cited them and 11 I won't belabor them, but one in particular, the Perez case
12 from the District of Connecticut, has a very thorough analysis 13 of the issue of when mitigating evidence should be disclosed in 14 a capital case. And it comes to what I would suggest is a very 15 logical conclusion, which is that when a defendant is charged 16 by indictment with a capital crime, the case becomes a capital
17 case. It does not await the attorney general's determination 18 of whether or not to file a death penalty notice. It does not 19 await the completion of the death penalty protocol. And Perez
20 is not alone in reaching this conclusion. We've cited other 21 cases in our papers.

22 And the reason for that is not only a legal reason, 23 which is that Brady evidence and other exculpatory evidence 24 should be disclosed in a time that is soon enough to be 25 effectively used, but it's also a practical and logical

1 component because, for example, delaying disclosure of this 2 information can result in sort of duplication of efforts and 3 also can be inconsistent with the judicial economy concerns 4 that this Court, in its trial management role, has the 5 authority and, indeed, the obligation to address.

6 We're talking in this case about a global 7 investigation. If the government parcels out information to us 8 in various stages in response to some of our requests, it says, 9 This is premature; we'll disclose this when the time comes,
10 without saying when that time will be, we may have to go back 11 and redo some of the investigative work that we've already done 12 because now we have additional information that we can 13 incorporate into our development of mitigation, into our 14 investigation of the facts of the case and so forth. And so it 15 just slows us down.

16 I mean, frankly, I was astonished to hear Mr. Weinreb 17 suggest September 2014, or the fall of 2014, as a proposed 18 trial date, which, needless to say, we find completely 19 unworkable, but especially given the position the government is 20 taking with respect to discovery. They're saying, We don't 21 have to give you evidence that relates to mitigation until 22 after the death penalty notice is filed, if it's going to be 23 filed, and that wouldn't be until the end of January.

24 Well, that leaves us, you know, a handful of months to 25 review all the new information, to incorporate it into our

1 investigation, and to revisit some of the things that we've 2 already taken a look at. And it's just not workable. It's a 3 waste of resources.

4 Obviously, this is a case in which we have 5 CJA-appointed counsel, mitigation specialists. The court is 6 paying for many of the things that we are doing in this case.
7 And to have to go back and redo things, or at least do some 8 overlap, would be inconsistent with the interest of justice.

9 In the W.R. Grace case, the Ninth Circuit talked about 10 the judge's ability and obligation and authority to ensure that 11 the -- that "to enter pretrial case management discovery orders 12 designed to ensure that the relevant issues to be tried are 13 identified."

14 The government starts out in one of its -- in 15 opposition by saying Brady is merely a rule of disclosure 16 designed to ensure basic fairness. It's interesting that the 17 government uses the word "merely." It doesn't seem to me it's 18 merely a rule of disclosure designed to ensure basic fairness; 19 it seems to me basic fairness is at the core of this.

20 The United States Attorney's manual includes a memo 21 written in 2010, often referred to as the "Ogden memo," that 22 encourages prosecutors to provide early discovery, to provide 23 information as soon as it's available, to provide information 24 that will help achieve the ends of justice, which is the 25 government's primary objective in any criminal case.

1 In this case the government has instead split hairs
2 about whether something is material but not pertinent, 3 favorable but not useful. It seems to me that this kind of 4 line drawing, especially in a capital case where the nature of 5 mitigation is essentially endless or limitless in terms of what 6 types of information could be helpful to the defense, it 7 doesn't have to be admissible, it doesn't have to be 8 exculpatory in the sense of going to guilt or innocence.

9 The government says it has produced, quote, virtually 10 all potentially mitigating information in its files. And that 11 sort of begs a number of questions. First of all, what does it 12 mean that "virtually all of the information has been produced" 13 since under our view, under the Perez court's view, under the 14 Delatorre court's view, "virtually all" is not what's required; 15 all of it is what's required.

16 And second of all, with respect to the reference to 17 "in its files," the government does not explain which files 18 those might be. Now, the U.S. Attorney's manual sets forth in 19 great detail what files are encompassed by that, but it seems 20 to me that the McVeigh case, which the government cites in a 21 somewhat cribbed manner, is really indicative. Because in 22 McVeigh the government said, "We're providing open file 23 discovery." And the judge said, "That's not good enough. It's 24 not enough for you simply to dump all your files," something 25 the government has declined to do in this case; "You have to

1 identify exculpatory and mitigating evidence and you have to go
2 to agencies like the CIA and obtain information from them."

3 Now, the government -- and we intend to pursue this by 4 letter discovery request, but just to give the Court some idea, 5 the government to date has not told us whether or not it has 6 information that was obtained through or derived from foreign 7 surveillance, FISA and the like, despite the fact that the 8 local rules require disclosure of intercepted conversations, 9 not limited to Title III, but intercepted conversations. So 10 the government again is taking for itself the prerogative of 11 saying, We'll decide what to disclose and when to disclose it, 12 but interestingly enough, doesn't say when that time will be.

13 We contend that that time is now, when we are 14 preparing our mitigation investigation, when we are in the 15 process of providing -- meeting our rule under the death 16 penalty protocol, and when we are digesting a massive amount of 17 information and trying to make sense of it.

18 With respect to the government's disclosure of simple 19 summaries of certain information, these are almost like tweets, 20 140 characters, maybe a little bit longer, summarizing a 21 general principle. There is one exception that is several 22 pages long. But the government has in those cases -- clearly 23 this information is exculpatory or mitigating, and 24 nevertheless, the government has resisted providing us with the 25 underlying interviews or grand jury statements.

1 It is obvious, it would seem, that when a witness says 2 something that is a general characterization of someone, or 3 gives sort of an overall description, that that witness would 4 have provided specific incidents, anecdotes or examples that 5 illustrate the larger point. We haven't seen that.

6 The government, I submit, should submit those 7 underlying documents, if the Court is not going to order them 8 to provide them to us, but as a fallback, the government should 9 submit those documents to the Court and allow the Court to 10 review in camera those documents to determine whether the 11 disclosures that have been made to date are adequate.

12 Again, why the government won't provide the documents 13 themselves is, frankly, baffling to us. We have a very 14 restrictive protective order in this case. We are not 15 permitted to disclose information unless it is in connection 16 with the preparation of the defense, and we have to keep a list 17 of people to whom we provide copies of discovery.

18 Why the government will not provide -- these are not 19 confidential informants. These are not secret sources, to our 20 knowledge. Why the government won't provide that information 21 is beyond us except that we -- it appears the government is 22 trying to retain every possible advantage in this litigation 23 for itself.

24 With respect to just a few of the specific requests, 25 I'm not going to belabor all of them; however, Mr. Weinreb

1 talked about filing a motion to suppress statements, for 2 example. And we appreciate your Honor not setting a deadline
3 for that. We do not have all the information that we need 4 regarding those statements at this time. Yes, we have the 5 statements, but what we do not have is the information 6 regarding the circumstances behind those statements.

7 The government has not responded to our request for 8 any communications among government agents, prosecutors, 9 government officials in general, and communications with the 10 Court regarding Mr. Tsarnaev's request -- repeated request both 11 orally and in writing -- for a lawyer.

12 With respect to the government's -- our request for 13 information about the Waltham murders and Mr. -- and Tamerlan 14 Tsarnaev's alleged involvement in that, the government simply 15 says it's an ongoing investigation. Well, that is a qualified 16 privilege, and under the local rules the government's 17 declination does not carry the day. The Court has an 18 obligation, including in camera inspection, if necessary, to 19 determine whether or not that information should be disclosed.

20 With respect to the A files and Rule 16, the 21 government's reliance on United States versus Armstrong, 22 frankly, is misplaced because in that case the information that 23 was sought was information that was relevant to a pretrial
24 motion to dismiss based on selective prosecution. What we're 25 seeking here is information, documentary information, that the

1 government has within its possession that we have been denied, 2 even with releases from the individual -- signed releases from 3 the individuals concerned, that would assist us in our 4 development of mitigation.

5 And it seems to me this is precisely the type of area
6 where the Court's supervisory authority comes into play. There 7 is absolutely no reason why this information shouldn't be 8 provided to us, especially under the existing protective order.
9 It would make our work easier. It would be -- add to our 10 efficiency in trying to do this. And the government, on the 11 one hand, seems to want to be pushing for an early trial date, 12 and at the same time is withholding information that could give 13 us the ability to move forward more quickly.

14 Going back, if I might, for one moment to the issue of 15 both surveillance before April 15th and interceptions and tips 16 provided by Russian authorities, the government says this is 17 premature. As I mentioned, it doesn't say when it intends to 18 either disclose this or tell us it has such information. The 19 Classified Information Procedures Act, Section 2, permits any 20 party to request a pretrial conference to address the existence 21 of such information. So it's within the Court's authority to 22 schedule such a conference and to address this.

23 Your Honor, with respect to the Court's comment that 24 your Honor does not see what we're requesting as Brady, I'm 25 frankly somewhat at a loss. I mean, it seems to me we've

1 identified particular areas. And crucial among those areas are 2 issues regarding the family -- Mr. Tsarnaev's family -- issues
3 regarding the relative roles of Tamerlan and Dzhokhar Tsarnaev
4 in the bombings. And it seems to me that those are precisely 5 the core types of issues that go to mitigation and are -- and 6 the government's --

7 I'm not sure if your Honor is saying that your Honor 8 feels that the disclosures so far are adequate or that those 9 are not issues that go to mitigation. And it would be helpful 10 if your Honor could expand on that.

11 THE COURT: Your better argument, in my view, is under 12 Rule 16 than under the Brady doctrine, which I view as, I 13 guess, more specific and limited than perhaps you do.

14 MS. CONRAD: Well --

15 THE COURT: Brady is essentially a remedy for what we 16 might call knowing suppression of identified information that 17 is recognizable to the government as exculpatory in the various 18 categories. It is not a general materiality standard as might 19 be more generously available to you under Rule 16.

20 MS. CONRAD: Well, I understand your Honor's point, 21 but the government, nevertheless, has an obligation under Brady 22 as it's broadly used. And as we have discussed in some of the 23 cases, they addressed -- and we've discussed the government's 24 opposition in which the government talks about materiality.

25 Materiality is the postconviction standard. And Brady

1 does impose an obligation, but it also imposes a remedy. The 2 remedy comes into play when the government has failed to 3 disclose or has suppressed material exculpatory or mitigating 4 evidence.

5 But the fact that we are in the pretrial stage, I 6 would submit, expands rather than contracts the scope of the 7 government's obligation. And that's something that's 8 recognized in the U.S. Attorney's manual. We cited the case 9 United States versus Safavian that talks about the fact that in 10 addressing pretrial disclosure in the pretrial standpoint, the 11 government should -- that the withholding of evidence should 12 not be viewed with the benefit of hindsight after trial.

13 It is true that Rule 16 requires disclosure of 14 material documents and objects, and we believe that that 15 requires the government as well to provide this. But Rule 16, 16 the government notes, also talks about evidence relating to the 17 case-in-chief.

18 Now, we think that is too narrow a view of the 19 Armstrong case. But I think materiality is clearly not the 20 standard under Brady in the pretrial posture in which we 21 currently find ourselves.

22 And it seems to me that some of the cases we cited, 23 including the Karake case, the Delatorre case, the Perez case, 24 the Ablett case, all of those are cases in which the government 25 was ordered to provide mitigating evidence in a capital case

1 before notice was filed.

2 May I just have one --

3 And I think McVeigh addresses this as well. It talks 4 about the government's burden under Brady which includes 5 information that is helpful to the defense both with respect to 6 punishment and guilt or innocence.

7 So, your Honor, I would submit that the government has 8 not complied, and, frankly, the whole tenor of the government's 9 opposition, especially this line about virtually all mitigating 10 evidence, is, you know, We'll give it to you if we feel like 11 it, when we feel like it. And your Honor has the authority to 12 order full disclosure at this juncture so that we can make 13 effective, and I would stress efficient, use of that 14 information in our development and investigation of this case.

15 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Weinreb?

16 MR. WEINREB: Your Honor, I think it is a completely 17 untrue and unfair characterization of the government's motion 18 or of its position in this case of how we've conducted 19 discovery to say that our view has been, We will give you what 20 we want, when we want. On the contrary.

21 As the Court itself acknowledged in the beginning, as 22 we all have to acknowledge, because it's written in ink in the 23 local rules, there is no requirement that mitigation evidence 24 be produced at any particular time, under Rule 16 or under the 25 local rules. And under the Constitution, it seems clear that

1 Brady -- to the extent mitigation evidence rises to the level
2 of Brady, it need only be produced in time for it to be used.

3 Notwithstanding that, the government has produced
4 virtually all the mitigation evidence in its possession 5 already; in other words, we have voluntarily stepped up, combed
6 through our files carefully to look for both evidence 7 identified by the defense as mitigating and evidence that in 8 our own judgment could be mitigating, and we have given it to 9 the defense early so that they could make the greatest use of 10 it.

11 We have not withheld any favorable material
12 information from them and we do not intend to. We have not 13 tacked close to the wind, in a phrase that's favored by the 14 defense and from Kyles v. Whitley; on the contrary, we've erred 15 on the side of caution and we have produced everything that we 16 believe corresponds to genuine categories of -- or falls within 17 genuine categories of favorable material evidence that they 18 could use either at trial or in sentencing. In some cases 19 we've given over entire reports. In virtually all cases, we've 20 just given them all the reports even though those reports 21 contain much -- much of what's in those reports, under no 22 conceivable standard, could be considered Brady or mitigating.

23 In some cases we've provided complete and accurate 24 summaries of what the witnesses have said that either 25 corresponded to categories identified by the defense as

1 mitigation theories or that we have judged are potentially 2 mitigating. To characterize them as tweets sounds like a 3 statement being made for the benefit of the press, not an 4 argument to the Court.

5 Obviously, these are not meant to be -- maybe I 6 shouldn't say "obviously" -- it's obvious to us; I hope it's 7 obvious to the Court -- but these are not meant to be bare 8 minimum statements, but rather, complete, accurate, total 9 summaries of all the information that bears on the categories 10 that were identified.

11 What the government has not produced is unfavorable 12 information, information that we believe we could use against 13 the defense, either at trial or in sentencing, or that we might 14 use to impeach defense witnesses. That is our right under the 15 adversary system.

16 In asking for access to our files, the defendant is 17 not asserting a right that exists under Brady, under Rule 16, 18 under the local rules or under any other law. They admit in 19 their motion that they don't even know their mitigation 20 theories yet.

21 If you look at page 6 of the defense reply brief they 22 write, "At this stage the defense does not have fixed 23 mitigation theories; instead, various hypotheses under our 24 investigation in the alternative are not necessarily consistent 25 with each other" -- that's what they characterize as their

1 Brady -- "and therefore," they go on to say, "the attempt to 2 characterize facts as either favorable or unfavorable is a 3 futile attempt." It can't be done.

4 Essentially what the defense is trying to do here is 5 obliterate the distinction between favorable and unfavorable 6 evidence and say, Since every single nugget of information in 7 your files is potentially favorable to us, you should open it 8 up to us and let us go on a fishing expedition looking for 9 things that we might turn to our advantage.

10 That obviously is not the law. It's certainly not the 11 law under the Constitution, it's not the law under Rule 16 -- 12 under any reading of the Rule 16 -- the local rules, and it's 13 not compatible with the adversary system. To the extent that 14 there is overlap evidence, evidence that could be used both at 15 trial and at sentencing, we have produced it. So that is a 16 nonissue.

17 As for our asserting, with respect to some specific 18 requests of the defense, that the requests are premature, the 19 purpose of that is, first of all, to raise the general
20 objection that it's all premature, because we believe that as a 21 purely legal matter it is all premature. No legal right to any 22 mitigation evidence has yet attached. The only legal right to 23 mitigation evidence, as I said earlier, exists under the 24 Constitution, and it's clear under Brady that the standard is 25 that it be produced in time for them to make use of it.

1 In this case we not only don't have a trial date, but 2 the defense is urging the Court not to set a trial date for 3 months hence. To say that at this point the legal right to all 4 mitigation evidence has attached would be novel under the case 5 law, I believe. Instead, we have asserted that defense simply 6 to make the point that we are producing what we are producing 7 voluntarily, and that in a very few narrow cases, we are 8 essentially still working on certain matters.

9 And let me turn to the specific requests so that I can 10 address those specifically. Essentially, with respect to 11 Requests 5, 7 and 8, the government's position is not that we 12 have material responsive to those requests and that we are 13 refusing to produce it; our response is that to the extent that 14 there is material responsive to those requests, we will either 15 produce it or we will file an appropriate pleading with the 16 Court. But at this point a motion to compel is premature 17 because there's no legal obligation on our part to produce that 18 information at this time.

19 With respect to Request 9, which is the information 20 about the Waltham homicide, that's a different matter. That is 21 a matter that is still actively under investigation by the 22 Middlesex District Attorney's Office. For that reason, we have 23 tacked closer to the wind when it comes to information with 24 respect to that investigation. Obviously, as is the case with 25 any criminal investigation, revealing the details of it while

1 it's still under investigation would have a tendency to 2 jeopardize it, to undermine it.

3 If there were, in fact, a legal right for the defense 4 to have that information at this point, formal compliance with 5 the requirements of the local rules and so on might be 6 required, but that's simply not the case at this point. The 7 defense cannot articulate a reason why they need all the 8 information relating to that investigation at this point. They 9 may never be able to articulate that kind of argument. But 10 even if they could come up with any kind of argument on that 11 score, they can't possibly show that with respect to that 12 narrow issue they need it now.

13 The defense spent a great deal of time earlier today 14 talking about how they're so overwhelmed with discovery that 15 it's going to take them months and months and months to go 16 through it, and even more time because they have to write 17 motions simultaneously. For them to say that despite all of 18 that they need the information that falls into these very 19 narrow categories immediately is disingenuous. It is certainly 20 not based in any legal right.

21 Given what the Court said, let me just address one 22 other thing. With respect to in camera review, the government 23 has nothing to hide. We have complied with our obligations.
24 We have no objection to allowing the Court to review anything 25 that's in our possession to assure compliance with our legal

1 obligations, if that's what the Court desires. We do not,
2 however, think the defense has a legal right to demand that 3 that be the case. They're not entitled to second-guess the 4 government's judgment of whether it has complied with its 5 obligations under Brady. That, under the law, is committed to 6 the government in the first instance.

7 We have complied with our obligations. And although 8 it is the case that the government sometimes, in cases where it 9 feels uncertain about whether something is Brady, asks the 10 Court to review it in camera and render essentially an advisory 11 legal opinion on it, we are not doing so in this case because 12 we're confident that we have fulfilled our obligations by going 13 above and beyond what the law requires in this area.

14 The defense also said at some point that the Court 15 under its supervisory authority could order that things be 16 produced, such as the A files of people remotely connected to 17 the defendant: friends of his, you know, relatives, cousins, 18 nieces, nephews. The government objects to that. There is no
19 right. The Court cannot, under its supervisory authority, 20 simply create new rules of discovery that the defense can then 21 come in and ask it to compel.

22 Congress, in writing Rule 16, the court in drafting 23 the local rules, and the Supreme Court in interpreting the 24 Constitution, have created and articulated what the rights to 25 discovery are for the defense, and there's no legal basis for

1 the Court to simply draft new ones because it suits the 2 defense, or they claim it would save them work or allow them to 3 substitute our investigation for theirs.

4 And that's really what this boils down to, your Honor,
5 from the government's point of view. We are not in any way
6 attempting to inhibit the defense from conducting a thorough 7 investigation of this case. We acknowledged when the 8 indictment was filed, yes, 17 of the charges carry a potential
9 death penalty. Obviously, it was a potential death penalty 10 case from the start. We did not object to the defense having 11 learned counsel, counsel learned in the death penalty appointed 12 days after the defendant had his initial appearance, indeed, 13 which was months before the indictment was even filed.

14 The defense has been thoroughly investigating the case 15 since then, including any mitigation case. The government has 16 been investigating its case. Under the adversary system, they 17 don't have to open their files to us and we don't have to open 18 our files to them. To the extent that fairness requires that 19 we produce certain information to them, we've produced it. But 20 we also have an obligation to zealously represent the United 21 States in this case, and to that extent, it's our duty to 22 assert our rights to keep in our own files information that are 23 the fruits of our investigation that we can use down the road 24 in the event that there is a trial and a sentencing phase in 25 this case.

1 And that is all we are seeking to do in this case.

2 MS. CONRAD: May I just respond very briefly, your 3 Honor?

4 THE COURT: Go ahead.

5 MS. CONRAD: First of all, I'm going to start with 6 the -- down in the weeds and hopefully work my way up a little 7 bit.

8 On this business about the A files, let's be clear 9 about what we're talking about here. Mr. Weinreb talks about, 10 you know, peripheral people. We're talking about the 11 defendant's nuclear family. We've asked for other individuals; 12 it is true. We have asked immigration for the A files. We 13 have provided signed release forms. We have been refused. We 14 are now probably going to have to embark on FOIA litigation to 15 get those files, which the government could get with a phone 16 call and provide to us.

17 Now, if the Court wants to see CJA counsel and 18 CJA-paid investigators spend their time on FOIA litigation to 19 obtain something that we submit these individuals have a legal 20 right to, that the government could provide to us at will, it 21 seems to me that that is a very poor use of judicial resources, 22 especially in this difficult budget time. And I think it falls 23 squarely within Rule 16(a)(1)(E). It is not a new rule. It's 24 been there for a very long time, although it used to be called 25 16(a)(1)(C), but it still said the same thing, which is

1 documents material to the preparation of the defense. And 2 Armstrong doesn't cover it, and the government could provide it 3 and has not offered a single reason why it won't.

4 And it seems to me that this is illustrative of the 5 government's position throughout this matter. The government 6 keeps saying it doesn't have to provide this information now, 7 but that is because the government is of the -- has taken an 8 extremely narrow view of 16(a)(1)(E), and the government also 9 takes a view that is contrary to the decisions in Perez, Karake
10 and so forth, Delatorre, that once there's a capital 11 indictment, we are entitled to mitigation evidence. We are 12 entitled to helpful evidence.

13 For the government to say, They have their 14 investigators, we have ours, frankly, is ridiculous. Yes, we 15 have investigators. We do not have a network of hundreds, 16 maybe thousands, of law enforcement, FBI agents all over the 17 world who are working on this case. As your Honor well knows, 18 we have a small group of people who are doing our best with a 19 large amount of information, much of which does not relate to 20 mitigation.

21 In addition, we do not have a grand jury. I'm not 22 saying we should have one. But frankly, this is not a level 23 playing field. We do not have the power to subpoena witnesses 24 and hold them in contempt if they fail to appear or refuse to 25 testify.

1 So the government has all these resources and the 2 government also has, as a result, a proportional obligation to 3 at least level the playing field a little bit. And to say that 4 the Court can't second-guess but has to take their 5 representation at face value that they have provided everything 6 that they're required to, when it is based on a cribbed reading 7 of their obligation, an erroneous view of the timing obligation 8 and an erroneous view of 16(a)(1)(E), it seems to me is just 9 plain wrong.

10 And for them to say, We've given you virtually all of 11 the discovery evidence, doesn't cut it. We are entitled to all 12 of it. And the Court is entitled to order the government to 13 provide information in an orderly and efficient manner, 14 especially if the government is eager for a trial date as soon 15 as possible. Thank you.

16 THE COURT: Okay. I'll take the matters under 17 advisement.

18 And I think, unless there's something else that we 19 haven't touched on --

20 MR. WEINREB: Nothing for the government.

21 MR. CHAKRAVARTY: I'm sorry, your Honor. Just 22 excludable delay, your Honor.

23 MS. CONRAD: Oh, I'm sorry. May I just say one more 24 thing? I apologize.

25 On the Waltham murder issue, as to that, I would

1 stress that under the relevant cases the Court does 2 have -- well, first of all, the government under 116.6 under 3 the local rules bears the burden in showing why that shouldn't 4 be disclosed. And the law enforcement privilege is a qualified 5 privilege as explored in the In Re Homeland Security case that 6 we cited in our papers.

7 So if the government is going to continue to withhold 8 that evidence, we do urge the Court, at a minimum, to look at 9 that material in camera.

10 MR. WEINREB: Your Honor, we would ask that if we are 11 going to wait to set additional dates in the future, that the 12 defense agree to an order of excludable delay and that the 13 Court enter the order notwithstanding --

14 THE COURT: Until February 12th, which is our next 15 status conference?

16 MR. WEINREB: Yes, your Honor.

17 MS. CLARKE: No problem, your Honor.

18 THE COURT: I think it's palpably appropriate under 19 the statute, and I'll so order. All right. We'll be in 20 recess. Thank you.

21 THE CLERK: All rise for the Court.

22 The Court will be in recess.

23 (The Court exits the courtroom and the proceedings 24 adjourned at 11:31 a.m.)
25

C E R T I F I C A T E

I, Marcia G. Patrisso, RMR, CRR, Official Reporter of the United States District Court, do hereby certify that the foregoing transcript constitutes, to the best of my skill and ability, a true and accurate transcription of my stenotype notes taken in the matter of Criminal Action No. 13-10200-GAO, United States of America v. Dzhokhar A. Tsarnaev.

/s/ Marcia G. Patrisso
MARCIA G. PATRISSO, RMR, CRR
Official Court Reporter

Date: 11/21/13